Dear Don:

From about 15 April 1952 to about 15 June 1952, you devoted your time to a study of the present and anticipated personnel and cargo transportation requirements of CIA in order to determine kind, size, and location in the Agency of a transportation organization appropriate to insure prompt and efficient transportation service.

Your highly professional approach and devotion to this problem produced an extremely interesting and worthwhile study of a very complex and difficult function. This study has been of inestimable value in planning the resolution of our transportation problems and I am confident it will continue to guide us in the future. May I offer my commendations and congratulations on this excellent study.

It has been a real personal pleasure to have been associated with you during these past months and we all wish you continued success in your new assignment.

Sincerely,
